

The Psychonomic Society announces the launching of a new journal: Cognitive Research: Principles and Implications (CRPI).

CRPI publishes new empirical and theoretical work covering all areas of Cognition, with a special emphasis on use-inspired basic research: fundamental and theoretically relevant research that grows from hypotheses about real-world problems. We expect that authors will be able to explain in a Significance section how their basic research serves to advance our understanding of the cognitive aspects of a problem with real-world applications.

Submissions to CRPI will be subject to rigorous peer review, in keeping with the standards of the Psychonomic Society, the sponsor of the journal. We will strive for rapid and broad-minded review. We expect clearly described, well-executed studies. We will not insist on adherence to any specific theoretical position but we expect that studies published in CRPI will advance our scientific understanding.

CRPI is an open-access journal. It will be supported by author fees. However, all fees are waived until Jan 1, 2017.

For more information (or to begin submission of your excellent manuscript) go to

<http://www.cognitiveresearchjournal.springeropen.com/>

Direct questions to Jeremy Wolfe, Editor-in-Chief jwolfe@partners.org

Associate Editors

Woo-Kyoung Ahn (Yale)

Vicki Bruce (U. Newcastle, UK)

Nora Newcombe (Temple)

Hal Pashler (UCSD)

John Wixted (UCSD)

Jeff Zacks (Wash. U)